TWO NEW REAR ADMIRALS.

Promotions of Capts. F. A. Cook and

Purnell F. Harrington.

The nominations of Capt. F. A. Cook and Capt. P. F. Harrington to be rear admirals in the navy were confirmed by the Senate

Rear Admiral Cook, who commanded the cruiser Brooklyn in the Santiago naval fight with the Spanish, is an old seaman of wide experience and a thorough master of the theory and practice of navigation. He was born in Northampton, Mass., in 1843, was graduated from the high school of his native town, and was preparing for college at Dudley Institute, when September 20, 1860, he received an appointment to the Naval Acadens. He left the school then at Newport, R. I., with the class of '63, and was assigned to duty on the Seminole, then engaged in blockading Texas. Capt. Cook began service as ensign under Far-ragut, who commanded the gulf squadron. Soon after he was ordered to the gunboat-Tennessee and thence to the Lackawanna, on which he remained till after the fall of Mobile. After Lee's surrender he proceeded to the Brooklyn navy yard with his vessel, which was then ordered out of commission. After a month's furlough he was ordered to the Vanderbilt, which, with the Monadnock, under the command of Commodore John Rodgers, made a voyage around Cape Horn, across the Pacific and return to San Francisco. This was notable as the first long cruise of an ironclad. After this voyage he was promoted to master and transferred to the Saranac of the North Pacific squadron. February 1, 1867, he became lieutenant, and a lieutenant commander in March, 1868. In the same year he was detached from the Pacific squadron and ordered to duty at the Naval Academy as instructor in mathematics. In 1870 he was transferred to the Pacific squadron, where he served as navigator on the Saranac, Pensacola and Richmond. Four years later Cook was ordered to the receiving ship Sabine at Portsmouth, from which, after two years' service, he was assigned to duty as executive officer on the Plymouth, and made a cruise up the Miss!ssippi as far as Vicksburg. In 1879 the Plymouth went out of commission and he returned to the Naval Academy as head of the department of seamanship. he was appointed inspector of the eleventh lighthouse district, with headquarters at. Detroit. Three years later he was placed in command of the sloop Ranger and assigned to special service on the lower coast of California. In 1889 he became inspector of ordnance at the Boston navy yard, and in 1893 was transferred to the Navy De-partment in Washington as assistant to the chief of the bureau of navigation, where he remained, attaining the rank of captain in 1806, until he assumed command of the Brooklyn. He commanded this vessel while it was part of the flying squadron under Commodore Schley and afterward when it was attached to Rear Admiral Sampson's command. Rear Admiral Purnell F. Harrington was

Naval Academy as a midshipman in 1861, was promoted to ensign two years later and ordered into active service aboard the steam sloop Ticonderoga. He served with the west gulf blockading squadron from 1864 to 1865, and was in the battle of Mo-bile bay and all other operations against the defenses at the entrance to this water-way. During the closing years of the war and for three years subsequent he was with the North Atlantic squadron. In 1868 he was attached to the Naval Academy. He was a master, a lieutenant and a lieutenant commander, respectively, in 1866, 1867 and 1868, and a commander in 1881. All this time he was in active duty on shore and

His first command after his appointment as commander was with the practice ship Dale, on which he served during 1881 and sloop Juniata on the As'atic station for three years, and was then transferred to the Naval Academy, where he served until 1889. During the summers of 1888 and 1889 he took charge of the Constellation, and from 1890 to 1893 he was a lighthouse inspector. After commanding the Yorktown for a number of years he was detailed for duty on board the monitor Puritan. He was made a captain in 1895.

FOLLOWED A FIRE ENGINE. Joseph Pushman, Bicycle Rider, Paid $9 for the Privilege.

Bicycle policemen attached to the various station houses throughout the city have been instructed to pay particular attention to bicycle riders and automobilists who make a practice of following the fire apparatus every time an alarm for fire is

These persons have given the fire department a great deal of trouble and annoyance. They must necessarily violate the speed law of twelve miles an hour to keep up with the engines.

The firemen at times have to slow up to avoid collision with wheelmen and automobilists.

As a result of the recent order Joseph Pushman was defendant in Police Court today on a charge of riding a bicycle at a greater rate of speed than allowed by law. Mounted Policeman McQuade told Judge Kimball that Pushman followed No. 14 engine from Pennsylvania avenue and 8th street northwest to 7th street and Virginia avenue southwest yesterday, and at one time was riding at a speed of twenty miles an hour.

The defendant denied the statement made by the officer, but the court accepted the
